Semester 4

Comparative Politics:

The study of comparing political systems, institutions, and processes across different countries to understand patterns, differences, and similarities. It aims to analyze political behavior, culture, and government structures globally.

Ancient Indian History:

The study of India's past from the earliest times to around the 8th century CE, covering ancient civilizations (like the Indus Valley), the Vedic age, the rise of kingdoms, and the development of religious and cultural practices.

Political Philosophy:

A branch of philosophy that examines concepts such as justice, power, rights, liberty, and the role of governments. It seeks to understand how societies should be organized and the ethical implications of political actions.

Psychology:

The scientific study of the mind and behavior, including how people think, feel, and act individually or in groups. It encompasses various subfields such as clinical psychology, cognitive psychology, and social psychology.

Gender Studies:

An interdisciplinary field that examines gender identity, roles, and relations. It explores how gender intersects with other social categories like race, class, and sexuality, and how societal norms shape gender perceptions.
