Program Duration: 3 Years (6 Semesters)

Semester 6

Development Studies:

An interdisciplinary field that examines social, economic, and political development, primarily in developing countries. It explores issues like poverty, inequality, sustainability, and the impact of policies aimed at improving living standards.

Indian Constitution:

The supreme legal document of India that outlines the framework defining the political principles, structure, powers, and duties of government institutions, as well as the fundamental rights and duties of citizens. Adopted on 26th January 1950, it is the longest written constitution in the world.

Environmental Policy:

A set of laws, regulations, and initiatives aimed at managing human impacts on the environment. These policies are designed to protect natural resources, reduce pollution, and promote sustainable development through government and private sector action.

Social Movements:

Collective actions by groups of people aiming to bring about or resist social, political, or economic change. Examples include civil rights movements, environmental movements, and feminist movements. They often challenge the status quo and advocate for reform.

Thesis:

A substantial piece of academic writing, usually required for a graduate or postgraduate degree, that presents the author's research and findings on a specific topic. It includes a clear research question, methodology, literature review, analysis, and conclusions.
